WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 11

A native of Bossice, to Lombardy, lately suffered bereavement by the death of his wife, and his grief was so poignant that his relatives deemed it expedient to prevent him from being present at the funeral. Returning to his house late in the evening after the buria, and entering his bedreom, he found to his horrer and consternation the lifetess form of his wife, robed in its death cerements, reclining on the bier and still awai-ing interment. The widower rushed into the street, and informed the police. who at first inclined to the opinion that sarrow had turned his brain. On secompanying him home, however, they soon convicced themselves that his extraordinary statement was in every particular correct. Inquiries showed that the village undertaker had 'torzotten all about the corpee," and had naited up an empty coffie, which had been suls quently conveyed and consigned to the grave with due religious ceremony and sorrowful ob-ervance.
